CRAIG HANSON is a navigational leader that takes a vision and makes it reality through sound strategy and business culture development. He intuitively sees the threads of opportunity that wind through an organization, brings them together into a coherent whole, and drives culture and strategy to create material business advantages. Focusing on innovative service and value creation, he fully understands that a company is only as good as those that comprise it. He has been able to attract and retain top industry talent at all levels within the organizations by helping create an environment where associates are valued, challenged, invested in, empowered and held accountable.

He had the fortunate experience of being able to learn business and ethics in business from his father, who was a Founder of Weigand-Omega Management in 1976. He started working as a young teenager cleaning pools, mowing lawns, painting and then leasing apartments before working his way into various leadership roles.

He considers himself blessed to lead and cast the vision for four companies now, three of which he helped found, utilizing innovations and best practices from each to better the whole.
